TRANSITIONAL AFTERCARE PROGRAM

Neurodivergent Process Group LGBTQIA+2S Affirming

For Teens

Join us for a supportive and inclusive process group tailored for neurodivergent youth! In this safe and identity affirming space, teens can freely share their experiences, challenges, and triumphs with others who understand. Facilitated by a neurodivergent therapist, discussions will focus on building coping strategies, fostering self-acceptance, and promoting mutual encouragement. Whether you're on the autism spectrum, have ADHD, or other neurodivergent characteristics, you'll find acceptance and solidarity among peers who truly understand. Together we'll explore unique perspectives, celebrate diversity, and cultivate a sense of community where everyone feels valued and seen.

Molly Williams, ACSW
#109462

Molly Williams has a Master of Social Work from the University of Southern California and advanced fellowship training from Children's Hospital Los Angeles (CHLA) in neurodevelopmental disabilities. She has special expertise in the presentation of autism in women and girls with co-occurring eating and sensory-processing disorders. Molly has provided autism consultancy services to faculty and clinicians at the University of Southern California and Children's Hospital Los Angeles, as well as adolescent counseling services in residential treatment, community mental health, and special education settings. Molly strives toward a strengths-based clinical approach that is holistic, warm, and rooted-in-empathy.
